26 Ballots Taken at National League Session—Spalding Had First Denounced Freedman as a Traitor and Marplet Hottest Fight in the History of Baseball Prolonged to Early Morning,

A. G. Spalding was elected President of Club- at the Fifth Avenue Hotel at 1:30 o'clock fork, St Louis, Cine anati and Boston clubs having left the meeting without permission and w tho it leaving proxies.

Soden, F. eedman, Bruth and Robison went away. N. E. Young then took the chair but soon retired in favor of Rogers of Philadelphia. A ballot was taken and Spalding was declared elected by the Chair, in accordance with Congressional precedent.

"Andrew Freeman must get out of the National League!" This was the sensational declaration of A. G. Spalding to the newspaper men at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday afternoon. It came as a part of a long statement, the result of a demand made upon Spalding for some definite information nd the causes that have led up to it. Spaldall representatives of the press through m he would make things perfectly clear to the American public. Spalding lost no time in declaring war on Freedman, the New York President, and his friends, Brush of nnati, Soden of Boston and Robison of St. Louis, the men who have been trying to force the trust scheme down the throats of the other magnates, with the result that there has been a deadlock since the magnates first convened on Tuesday morning.

"The League has been in session for four days," said Spalding, "and not a line of authentic information has been given to the public. The statement has been made that only minor affairs have been talked of It is a falsehood. The trust scheme, with all its evils, has been the chief topic as advanced by Freedman and Brush and it has caused a deadlock. My name was placed in nomination for the Presidency without my consent. For four days I have been waiting for a decisive vote. I am incensed that such a matter should cause a delay and I believe that it is up to me to make a statement re-garding some things that are of vital interest o the welfare of the National League and the game which is America's national sport.

"After I had made my talk in the League meeting on Wednesday and the resolution to bring the election of Spalding to an immediate head had been blocked by a 4 to 4 rote, a message was received by me from Brush and Robison asking for a secret con-ference with them. I promptly refused, saying that I was in the open and would not confer in secret with anybody. Then Brush, Freedman and Robison sent out the malclously untrue story that I had been defeated for the Presidency and Robison, I am in-formed, made a further statement that I would not be mentioned in the meeting again.

"This kind of business leads me to say that I will be mentioned again and that there will its affairs inroughout this season at least. I know of no one better capable of filling this position and none so good.

I wish that we could unanimously agree to tender the position of President of the National League to Mr. A. G. Spalding and do so immediately. It that could be done and Mr. Spaiding would accept the position, it would be an easy matter for the National League to bring about some onner excellent ideas that have been advanced by different gentlemen and bring them about at once.

I wish to say in regard to Mr. N. E. Young, our President and Secretary, that I have nothing but kind words and good wishes for him. I know that Mr. Young's health has been so poor for the last few years that he has not been in a condition to administer the duties of this office as they should be, and I think it would be doing him the greatest good on earth for the League to pay his salary for the balance of the term and give him a vacation, which he so justly deserves.

Please consider this letter confidential and it would do no harm for each President to express his views on this matter, and at any rate let in do something that part of the public will applied that we are entitled to have in the national game of professional baseball.

I know of but two objections that could be made to Mr. Spalding: First, that he is a large owder in the Chicago club and accond, that he is interested to a great extent in supplying outfits such as balls, bats and uniforms to National League clubs. An ideal President to my mind would be a person entirely disinterested, as regards club ownership, having no financial interest in any department of the game. Personally, these objections which I have named would have little weight with me, as I do not consider them of sufficient importance to offset the many qualifications possesse & by Mr.
Spalding, who is eminently fitted for the position
and would fill the offsee with great credit.

In your letter you mention A. G. Spaiding as the man to assume the Presidency of the National League: to my mind he is everything that could be desired for that position, and I think stands unique and aione to-day, having great ability to adjust differences, as shown in the past in the various enterprises where he has been engaged, where it has required great tact and ability, and he has always come out successfully in such undertakings, and I know of no man in the game or out of the game to-day that would command the respect of the press and public as he would, and I believe if he could be persuaded to accept the position, (but I am aftraid he would not; I do not think it would take long hefore he would have us all headed in the proper direction, and the National League speedily reassume the proud position before the country that it held when its affairs were conducted by such men as Huribut and Mills, and at which lime Mr. Spaiding also was in the councils of the League.

Hart of Chicago, while expressing doubt as to whether Spalding could be prevailed on to accept the Presidency, replied that "this matter will have to be handled in a very diplomatic and tactful manner in order to have Mr. Spalding accept the position at all. I agree with you that if he can be induced to accept the position it will be the best move that the National League can make."

No reply from Dreyfuss or Freedman appears in the correspondence, but it contains a letter from Brush to Freedman dated Feb-3, 1901, as follows:

A general manual and the statement of A. G. Spaiding for President I have this to say. If we should carry outthe ideas discussed in Mr. Soden's room with Soden, Robison and yourself that night, we would have no occasion in my judgment for a President. All of the clerical work necessary to the conduct of baseball would be contributed by secretaries employed for that purpose. The entire question of handling clubs, leagues, national agreement, players and umpires would be handled by a board of control, or, as we might say, by a board of regents.

There would be no more contracts with ball players. The board of regents would license all ball players, managers and umpires, and in issuing their licenses under the rules and conditions that govern, E would only issue licenses to players to play with certain clubs in certain leagues. It might only issue licenses to managers to manage certain clubs in certain leagues and all violations of rules would be handled by the board of regents, and for a violation of rules the licenses would be suspended for a given period of time.

The board of regents would be composed of

I will be mentioned again and that there will be a decisive vote on my candidacy. I refuse to withdraw my name and put it up to the League to act. I am not asking for votes.
In fact, I have not said yet whether I will accept the Presidency or not. For that matter the League will be forced to elect or defeat me in total ignorance of my intention in the matter.

"And I will be elected, too. I defy the Boston club and its President, Mr. Soden, to vote against me in the face of public sentiment in his city. I do not know whether he intends to vote for me or not, but I repeat
I defy him to oppose me.

"I wish to say further that when I am elected and I decide to accept the Presidency it will be only upon one condition. Andrew Freedman must get out of the National League and the baseball business as controlled by that body. There must be no quibble. Freedman must retire and his friend Brush, if it

PRINCETON TO PLAY HARVARD. FOUR FAVORITES IN FRONT. Differences Patched Up and Teams Will

Meet on the Diamond on June 11. PRINCETON, Dec. 13.-Harvard and Princeton have patched up their differences in base-ball and a game has been scheduled for June 11 at Princeton. This information was offi-cially given out here to-day. Concessions it will be recalled, began two years ago when Harvard, after each university had won a game in the series refused to arrange a deciding contest. At that time it was said that the authorities at Cambridge would not allow the Crimson nine to play on any other than college grounds while the university was in session. In addition the Harvard men argued that they were not out for the college championship and were satisfied, they as-gued that they were not out for the college championship and were satisfied, they asserted, if the season ended in a victory over Yale. All other games were regarded as practice events. But the Princeton authorities pointed to the fact that the 'Varsity'H' was awarded to all men playing in the games with Princeton, and they thought that the Tigers were entitled to more consideration than Harvaru was willing to accord.

Since then the universities have, until now, been unable to reach any satisfactory understanding. Harvard has persistently maintained its stand that the number of games be limited to two, and Princeton has just as stubbornly refused to enter into a series which might again terminate indecisively. Consequently Harvard and Princeton did not meet on the diamond last season, and for some time it has looked as though they would fail to get together for the coming season.

As a last resort, however, it was proposed that one game be played every alternate year at each university, and on this basis this reconciliation was affected liarvard has shown a conciliatory spirit appreciated here by conceding to play the first game at Princeton on June 11, the last day of Princeton's commencement week. Both the Tigers' games with Yale will be played before that date. There is universal satisfaction among the undergraduates over the turn affairs have taken. The announcement was also made to-day that A. R. T. Hillebrand, the Tigers' old pitcher and football player, who coached the Middles' eleven last season, will have charge of the development of the Princeton nine next spring.

George Bethner Falls to Throw Two Men in Fifteen Minutes.

George Bothner, the local crack, essayed George Bothner, the local crack, essayed to throw two men at the London Theatre on the Bowery last night at catch-as-catch-can style in fifteen minutes or forfeit $50. Bothner succeeded in beating his first man, Tom McMann of this city, but his other opponent, Jim Galvin, a heavyweight from Ireland, Stave O'Donnell, was the reference. McMann of this city, but his other opponent. Stayed. Steve O'Donnell was the referee. McMann went after Bothner in spirited fashion. He showed surprising strength and got away from holds which an ordinary man could not very well resist. In the first five minutes Bothner almost had McMann down, but the latter persisted in getting off the mat and Bothner was forced to try all over again. In this way McMann recovered his wind. Finally, after 10 minutes and 15 seconds. Bothner got a back hammer lock and McMann labored hard to break the hold. It was no use, however, for Bothner pinned both shoulders and secured a fall. Bothner had only 4 minutes and 45 seconds in which to conquer Galvin and utilized all his strength and skill in the attempt to defeat his opponent. But Galvin's size and strength were too much of a handicap and at the time limit he was still up and doing. He received $25 and the decision. To-night Bothner is slated to meet three men, including Tom Carey, the "Dentist." Bothner will endeavor relinquish $75.

"YANK" KENNY DISQUALIFIED. Strikes the Referee in Bout With Jack O'Brien at Liverpool.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LIVERPOOL, Dec. 13. - Jack O'Brien, of Philadelphia boxed "Yank" Kenny at the Adelphi Theatre here last night for the championship of England and £650. The building was crowded by thousands of spectators. O'Brien had the best of the fighting and hit his opponent at will. Kenny refused to obey the referee, who warned him. Afterward he struck at the referee and when he had refused again to break away he was disqualified and the verdict given to O'Brien.

TALENT HAS A STREAK OF GOOD LUCK AT NEW ORLEANS.

Burnie Bunton Wins the Six-Furiong Handicap in a Drive From If You Dare -The Ring and Poolrooms Lase Heavtly on Deloraine -Jockeys Disciplined.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 13.—Threatening weather and a poor card did not assist the racing any at the Fair Grounds this afternoon. The crowd was a fair one, but the betting was very light. The only race in which anything like class was displayed was the six-furlong handicap. Burnie Bunton was an 8 to 5 favorite, while Tom Kingsley was the second choice at 4 to 1. Burnie Bun-ton proved to be the correct one, as she manton proved to be the correct one, as she managed to get home half a length to the good.

If You Dare secured the place in a hard drive
by a neck from B. G. Fox. Tom Kingsley made all the running, but tired badly in the last quarter and finished in the ruck.

Things broke a great deal better for the Ex-Jockey Felix Carr reached here to-day with a carload of horses from Benning.

A cluster of cheap maidens went to the post in the opening race. Crescent City, the only thoroughbred ever foaled in New Orleans, was the favorite. She won handly by a length from Meme Wastell. Star Coton, who finished second yesterday at the gallop by four lengths. Crosby, the even-money favorite, ran a very poor race and Inished a bad sixth. Divertisement, in a driving finish, managed to land home first in the steeplechase han-dicap, at the fancy odds of 12 to 1. Bristol,
